entrance to their building. The dumping occurs on the fourth floor of the property, at the base of the staircase, in front of the elevator and in front of the residents' mailboxes. Residents said they reported the problem to the property manager several weeks ago, and to the landlord's maintenance staff several times. "The garbage has been piling up for weeks," said resident Kate Smith. "We're finding trash all over, cans, bags, boxes, plastic, little bags of garbage. They're just piling up. It's an eyesore for everyone." "We use the elevator every single day and we know people use the garbage chute to take the elevator down to get bags of garbage in, so we know that's how it's being done," she said. "I'm disgusted." The maintenance staff said the garbage is being dumped out of the property's garbage bin into the storm drain. The garbage is being picked up regularly, they say, but the residents are complaining because it's an ongoing problem. The waste includes a lot of human waste, according to residents. "We've had to pick up items like feces and urine," said resident Sandra Nichol. "It's nasty. The garbage is so, so dirty." Lisa McKenzie, whose windows overlook the dump area, says she has even seen someone bringing trash bags down to the dump. "I've even seen some people bring their own containers to the dump and throw it out," she said. "It's disgusting." Residents say they have called 311 to report the problem and have met with both a health inspector and the property manager. "All the letters we sent to the property manager have gone unanswered," said resident Alice O

Invention The present invention relates to the field of telecommunication. More specifically, the present invention relates to the field of Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) communications. 2.

Background of the Invention

Nowadays, VoIP technologies have received a lot of attention. VoIP technologies, or communication through Internet Protocol (IP) are a means of transmitting voice over an Internet-based network infrastructure. VoIP is an emerging alternative to conventional public telephone service. VoIP is also known as voice over Internet. However, even though VoIP may be employed as an alternative to traditional telephone service, in many areas, VoIP is not as attractive as traditional telephone service because, in many instances, VoIP does not provide the wide geographic availability that traditional public telephone service provides. Thus, what is needed is a way to provide wide geographic availability of VoIP services that will not require significant investment in the infrastructure necessary to provide such services. One embodiment of the present invention provides a gateway for use with a packet network, where the packet network comprises a packet routing structure that provides packets to at least one gateway, the gateway comprising a first set of signaling connections for receiving at least one call, the call including at least one signaling message, and wherein the signaling connection is defined by the signaling message. The packet network further comprises a second set of signaling connections for receiving at least one ringback request, the ringback request 82138339de
