But for one teen, her experience was even more heartbreaking because she didn't know how she was going to pay for the new device she desperately needed. Shelley Schenker, 16, of the town of Orland Park, Illinois, was born with a hole in her heart called a ventricular septal defect. To keep the hole open, she requires daily medication to keep her pressure in check, and she's also had two major operations to try to keep her alive. While Schenker has been receiving the medication since she was born, her family did not have insurance. It's because of this that she was unable to get the surgery she needed to keep her alive. It was about two years ago, that she had enough of the pain and suffering and took it upon herself to fundraise for the surgery she needed. It was at this time she started using social media and online fundraising tools to raise money for her surgery. It's a way that she could find ways to make the most out of her situation and not worry about cost. During this time, her heart was not doing well and was closing up on her. By the time she had the surgery, there was no more room for her heart to work and she had a 100% chance of dying. Schenker had a lung transplant, but her body rejected it and the graft did not work. She was put in a medically induced coma for a month, after which time she woke up and made a complete recovery. “I was the last of four children born in 2014 with my sister having a sister born before me and my brother having a brother born before him,” Schenker said, according to the Huffington Post. “There was always change the order and add additional tools to your toolbar. To use advanced editing tools, you can now add all the tools you need to your drawing toolbars, instead of having to open each tool individually.
