Hearts of Iron III: For the Motherland is a grand strategy video game developed by Paradox Development Studios and published by Paradox Interactive. It was released on Microsoft Windows, OS X and Linux on 18 June 2014. The game focuses on the drama that takes place in the early 20th century, starting in the aftermath of the Russian Revolution. The objective is to gain the strongest influence over each world by conquering and annexing nations and expand their influence and power. The game was developed based on Paradox Development Studio's grand strategy game Paradox Development Studio. Due to the commercial success of the first two games in the series, demand for the third game grew and it was an instant hit upon release. The game uses a total victory system that tasks players with achieving player victory and a total victory for their faction in the fourth campaign. Gameplay Hearts of Iron III: For the Motherland is a grand strategy video game. The game is played from a player's view, with each nation a player controls having its own home map. The events of the game's storyline also take place on a map, displaying the historic and current political events, such as the plays of the World Wars, the Great Depression and the rise of communism. What sets it apart from most modern grand strategy video games are the political events which occur between world wars, such as the Russian Civil War, Siberian Intervention and National Revolution. Since the story of the game is based on historical events, it is up to the player to make decisions that have a major impact on which way the various countries in the world go. These decisions include economic affairs, diplomacy, battle strategy, research and development, and a few other details including communication and evaluation of world power. For example, the player can choose to ally themselves with the Soviet Union but only after the alliance with France has been established. One major difference between the first two games and this one is that the story arc of the nations' history is not laid out like a film: the major conflicts of the World Wars are only presented as such by events. The player only begins winning and losing eras when countries are converted to 'Allied States', thereby, changing the overall background of the game. Instead of plotting a historically accurate course through the world map, the player is given the chance to sabotage or influence events (by properly choosing your alliances) that take place in the various countries, thus changing the course of history. Viewable from the top of the play map is the historical world map (segment
